Description

Tested on version 9.7.11

I tried to find the reason why an IdmIdentity NOTIFY event was created, i.e. the parent event of my event. But when I put the UID to the filter, no event was found. So I think the filter "Entity type / Entity or event identifier (like)" doesn't work well.

I reproduced it with the the help of filter by date:

1. Here you can see both events - parent and the child, and parent UID

3. Try to filter the parent event by its UID - none is found:

Like operator for uuid is little specific, see field help (under help icon):

"Given uuid identifiers cannot contain dashes (short identifier can be given or dashes can be removed)."

But I can add clause with equals (or) as UX improvement - both options can be supported

Thanks, this works! But it really isn't much user friendly, since all other parts of IdM expect you to use the whole UID and fail when you write only part of it.
Before I created this ticket, I even clicked on the help icon, but I didn't read the text carefully because it looked like the standard text used in fulltext help icons. So this is another feedback for UX - if some text is only slightly different, but the different lines at the top please :-)

Thx for feedback :)
This filter was added before quick uuid links between agendas, so i wanted to support short uuid (which was shown in table) to make it a litte easier + help was added ... but i can see, every help can be pointed as bug :)

It's implemented, now is posible to use whole uuid identifier (with dashes) too, commit:
<https://github.com/bcvsolutions/CzechIdMng/commit/84879f8f4e8929cb567aa68eb696fe22c5ee8013>

Could you provide me a feedback, please?

I did review and test. Filtering by full UUID format works now. Thanks for that.
